

Domvs London announces Luciano Giubbilei collaboration

It sounds like ultra-prime developer Domvs London is cultivating some big plans over in California.

Luciano Giubbilei

The firm announced a joint venture with Junius Real Estate Partners – a real estate investment unit within J.P. Morgan Private Bank – last year and has just appointed a big-name landscape designer to work on a series of major acquisitions in LA.

Three-time gold award winner at the Chelsea Flower Show, Luciano Giubbilei, will apparently be curating the landscape at the “collection of contiguous estates”, the details of which are yet to be revealed.

Winner of the prestigious “Best in Show” gong at last year’s show, the Italian’s creations are influenced by the Classical Italian design heritage and garner high praise for their timelessness and understated elegance.

Giubbilei: “Domvs London is the only developer that I work with because they recognise that gardening is about responsibility as much as design. They allow me to express my art and understand that the process of sourcing plants is in itself an art and collaboration, the expression of a garden is very important.”

Jon O’Brien, Founder and CEO of Domvs London: “We are thrilled to be working once again with Luciano and look forward to continuing our collaboration on an international scale.”

Domvs formed the JV with New York-based Junius at the end of last year and has been busy expanding the brand into North America and setting up a new Stateside operation, appointing British designer-to-the-stars Gavin Brodin as Partner and Creative Director.
